

Hey all you cool cats and kittens,

Today we learned about the Scarlet Macaw. It is one of the largest parrot groups with a wingspan of 3 ft and almost 3 feet in height. Like all Macaws they are able to mimic speech and can be taught words. Due to their size and the fact they can speak I think they would do well in a gang as they could beat people up both physically and emotionally with their words. There's no science to that, I'm just spitballing.

Here are the emails of the panelists who spoke at our meeting tonight:

Amanda (vet student at MSU): aubinam1@msu.edu

Marty (zookeeper at Maryland Zoo): martyhome99@gmail.com

Nick (education assistant at MSU museum): vanack22@msu.edu

Feel free to email them with any questions you have!

Remember that there is a fundraising opportunity going on-return your cans and bottles and send us the funds, and the proceeds will go to the Dian Fossey Gorilla Fund. Also, if you raise the most funds we'll give you a prize!

see yall next week,
