

Hey everyone,

Thanks for coming to our second meeting this fall. Today we talked about our summer experiences (both during COVID and previous summers) and learned about the invasive Red Swamp crayfish.

Red Swamp crayfish are a species of crayfish that are invasive to Michigan. They are thought to have been introduced through live food markets, the Novi school system, and people releasing their pet cray into the wild Livonia habitat. Red Swamp Crayfish out compete native crayfish species and cause drainage issues where they burrow.
