

G'Day Members,

Today we had a great meeting hearing from Shubhechha Sharma on her experience working for the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) in Nepal and on her research on human-wildlife conflict with snow leopards. If you have further questions feel free to reach out to her at sharma19@msu.edu.

We would also like to give a HUGE shout-out to our social coordinator Olivia for running the meeting tonight.

The animal of the week is the tardigrade which may be better known as the water bear or moss piglet. These little critters give the cockroach a run for its money as they can survive desiccation, extreme temperatures, no oxygen, vacuums, and outer space (talk about a jack of all trades). We give the tardigrade an 8/10 as they are quite small and found in places that would kill us such as outer space. Why not a 10/10 you might ask? Because anything called a moss piglet does not deserve to get a 10/10 on the fight scale and because they aren't deadly they just live in deadly places.

Just a reminder that our next meeting will be fully on zoom next week due to thanksgiving. The zoom link will be posted at the end of the email.

T-shirts and other ZSA swag will be created after thanksgiving so keep an eye out for updates. Pictures of the T-shirt are posted below for reference.

We have a restaurant fundraiser THIS THURSDAY from 4-8 pm at the Panera bread in Okemos. You can order online, in person, or for delivery. Just show the flyer or enter the code PRFUND for us to get the money. The flyer is posted at the end of this email for more details.

Speaking of fundraisers our lovely fundraising coordinator Cassidy has organized a fun way for us to help our finned friends while also upgrading our accessory game. Check out the flyer posted below for more info!

Memes of the week:

Heck depression, if I see him in the streets, he's gonna get it take care,
