

Hi Folks,

Do sharks get cancer? Are animals in zoos unhappy? Can you only get jobs in your specific major? All these questions along with many other science myths were discussed in our meeting yesterday! If you were unable to make our meeting you can do some myth busting of your own by looking through the google slides posted below.

The animal of the week was the Red-tailed boa. With a scientific name that lacks all creativity (Boa constrictor) and the ability to swim, this very large non-venomous snake is all sorts of fun! The ZSA E-Board gives the Red-tailed boa a 8/10 because
1. they are big and 2. They have small shark hooked teeth that sound quite painful. We're going to pass on fighting the animal of the week this week.

Did someone say POTTER PARK ZOO TRIP?!? That's right you read that correctly ZSA trips will once again be starting back up. Please fill out this form so we can gauge interest, get numbers, and start to figure out carpool plans. Bonus if we get enough people we might get a behind the scenes tour and you might see the E-Board fight an animal IRL (the google form on which animal that will be will be posted in an upcoming email.

There is still time to find a summer job or internship!!! Check out the IBIO Hands on database and the FW job board to see what opportunities are available. Also we would love to hear what internships/jobs y'all have gotten for this summer :)

Welp that is all for today.

LOL (lots of love),
