

Welcome back from Spring Break, everyone:

This past week's slideshow theme was the Lady Ross's Turaco! It's a mainly frugivorous bird found in Kenya, Central, and South Africa. Their red feathers have a special pigment called Turacin (copper-based), and if you were to stir a glass of water with a feather the water would turn pink. IUCN Status is Least Concern. Definitely check them out if you have time!

Opportunities in Zoology!
